Old Settler's Steakburger Chef Description

In 2017 we sold approximately 2613 Steakburger patties in four different combinations and these burgers accounted for roughly $7,000 dollars in sales... So they are a key menu item and today let's talk about the role of being a Steakburger chef. This role works on average a 3-4 hour shift with at least one helper and at times two helpers depending on how busy we get. Great opportunity to grab a buddy or two for a shift and bond or also meet new people and learn from a veteran. Again, remember Old Settler's days will run from June 22-26 and we will be looking for roughly 33 spots to be filled with burger chefs. In the tent we will have 2 large flat top grills, and depending on the time we can have up to 50+ burgers cooking at once. Normally, one person of the team is responsible for loading the grill up, flipping burgers and moving them from one end of the grill to the other. As the burgers get near to being cooked, the other team member starts working to add cheese to some of the burgers and pulling them off and putting them on a bun as either a single or double. If we are not too busy that person will also wrap the burger and mark it with S, SC, D, DC to help distinguish what type of burger it is and then pass it to the serving line to be stored. During busy times like a Friday night we will have a third person in the mix to help wrap burgers, run and get more cheese, communicate with the front lines on what is needed, etc.. The main rule for working on the grills is to never turn off the pilot when shutting down the grills.

If you have any questions about this activity reach out to some of the greats, Cullen Casey, Stan Adams, Kip Dubois, Eric Stone, Brandon Schmitz. Again, please save the date for June 22-26 and look forward to more possible volunteer opportunities in the coming weeks. Finally, for all the statistics fans out there, we sell 3.17 cheese varieties of burgers for each plain burger.
